

We have concluded the electrical measurements on encapsulated ladders
The results show that the encapsulation does not change the depletion voltage and has little or no consequences on the leakage current.

